ARCHITECTURAL INFORMATION:

Along the main plantation street to the south of the oval drive, Cleland Singleton, younger son of the builder of Kensington Plantation, built his residence when the plantation was split in 1870-80. It was a one-story structure with three rooms built high off the ground on stilts. In the 1920's, the open basement was closed in to create a two-story structure. From 1925 - 1941 it was occupied by the plantation overseer. It has subsequently burned down.

PROJECT INFORMATION:

This report was prepared for the Union Camp Corporation, owner of the property, as a requirement of the Memorandum of Agreement with the Army Corps of Engineers, dated March 1982. The writers were Preservation/Urban Design/Incorporated, and the information was based on previous research conducted by Triad Architectural Associates.
